

Bay philanthropist wins another honor

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Philanthropist Keith Campbell and his Keith Campbell Foundation have been honored by the National Wildlife Federation.

The federation honored Campbell with its Conservation Achievement Award in the philanthropy category at an awards ceremony on Thursday.

Since 1998, Campbell, an investment adviser, has donated more than $50 million to environmental causes, mostly in the Chesapeake Bay region.

Campbell lives in Towson, but his foundation is based in Eastport. The foundation has supported many local efforts, including all of Anne Arundel County's riverkeepers.
